Professor in educational science at the Université du Québec en Outaouais

Martine Peters is a full professor in educational science at the Université du Québec en Outaouais. She received her PhD in Educational Psychology from the University of Ottawa in 1999 in the field of French as a second language. Hired at the UQAM in 2000 and then at the UQO in 2006, she works in the fields of languages and technopedagogy. Her research interests focus on the development of academic integrity among high school, college and university students. She is the director of the Academic Integrity Research Groupe (AIRG), whose research focuses on digital creation strategies, strategies mobilized by students during the implementation of their informational, writing and referencing skills. Peters' research is funded by the governments of Quebec and Canada. She has published numerous articles on the subject and given numerous communications and workshops in Quebec, Canada and abroad.
