

Cinta Gallent-Torres

Assistant Professor of French

University of Valencia, Spain

PhD in Educational Intervention from the University of Valencia (UV), she currently teaches French Language, Translation, and Culture at the Department of French and Italian Studies at UV. She supervises academic work at various levels, including master's and PhD theses.

She has previously taught at institutions such as the University of Connecticut, the College of Continuing Studies, the Burgundy Europe University, and other Spanish universities, both public and private. Additionally, she was a visiting PhD researcher at Stockholm University and served as a volunteer Language Coordinator at the Språkstudion Language Learning Resource Center.

She holds a certificate as an Integrity Councilor from the International Institute of Research and Action on Fraud and Plagiarism in Academia (Geneva).

Her research interests include emerging technologies, ethics in scientific publishing, AI-assisted academic fraud, second language teaching, and university student tutoring. She has contributed various publications to these fields and has been invited as a keynote speaker in many academic conferences.

She is a member of the Institute of Research and Action on Fraud and Plagiarism in Academia (IRAFPA), the Ibero-American Network of Academic Integrity Research (Red-IA), and the Forthem Alliance.